9 o'clock Fri night.

Lover Son -

Heard from you today - and I just naturally "hollered".
It's a huge disappointment for you not to be able to go to the SAE convention - that I know - and on the other hand the POs are going to miss you. Sommie, I'll try to take unto myself a lesson from that.

Today has been a fly-away one. Here I'm home long enough to write a few lines - and off. I'm sending you you a bid like what we are issuing tomorrow at 8 o'clock. I'm on my way now to get a messenger boy, so he'll get here on time.

See, I got to be at the office just the same in the morning. I already told you about the π & tea Sunday night - oh, oh, how relieved when these bids get in. And if any of them are "no", - well, one thing I won't be worrying about them.

Got a nice silk waist to wear with my blue suit. That's old enough to go to school now. The waist is a navy too only with loud Roman stripes.

Gale Seaman (you remember him - the y m c a er) lectured at assembly this morning. they tell me he talked a #1 ^W out of almost everyone, and now I'm heaps glad I was at H.S. observing.

Have I told you of the grand books we will have in our library? Gee! that's where a lot of money has gone. However, the modern drama course I'm taking means a collection of real good plays, and you are going to enjoy reading them. That's what I think most when I'm making these elaborate notes.

So I go around whispering all of your hanging up on the wall, and to you on my dresser - whispering love words & kisses right at you.

Sometime you ought to turn and look at me out of that frame where you seem to be wanting "to go home now."

Yes, and sometime sooner than we think you will come to see me, and then there'd be no lonely whisperings, but everything joy, joy!

That's what it is now too Sommie, cause "I've got you and you've got me, and everything else is fine!"
